

The design of the new community center captures our rich historical heritage while giving us flexibility to benefit everyone in Castroville.

Celebrating the Groundbreaking of the New Community Center at Castroville Regional Park

We are excited to announce the groundbreaking of our new community center at Castroville Regional Park, a milestone that promises to enrich our town's recreational and social life. The event was attended by distinguished guests, including Paul Carey, David Merz, Sheena Martinez and Herb Dyer of City Council, Mayor Darrin Schroeder, Representative Tony Gonzales, Helen Delevan of the Friends of the Castroville Regional Park, Adriana Arrington-Calk of the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board along with other board members and individuals committed to the Castroville Regional Park and swimming pool. Their presence and unwavering support highlight the collaborative effort that has made this project possible.

Mayor Schroeder and Representative Gonzales both spoke about the positive impact this center will have on our community, providing a space for gatherings, events, and activities that bring us together. The architect on the project, Laurence Garcia with LPA Design Studio in San Antonio, mentioned that he and his team took several trips to Castroville to have a better understanding of our vernacular design aesthetic. Helen Delevan's dedication to the park and its development has been instrumental in realizing this vision.

As we embark on this exciting journey, we look forward to seeing the community center become a vibrant hub for residents of all ages. This new facility is not just a building; it is a testament to the strong, united spirit of Castroville.
